Craig Hunter: On Camera Talent + Stunt Doubling

For casting directors, the bigger the gig, ... the more critical the hire!

By the time Hunter is finished with hair and makeup but he is the part. Hunter has stood in for leading men like Ewan MacGregor, Jeremy Renner, and that guy - what is his name - from that show Mad Men! By taking their place during on camera action sequences he assumes not only their size and shape but he expresses their persona as dynamic movement as only great doubles can do.

Modest, genial and collaborative. . . Hunter is the ideal hire.

One of the most essential qualities is the ability to be drama free on the set - no matter how much pressure there is! The confidence with being supremely comfortable as on camera talent is self-evident with Hunter. This is the consummate pro who 'has been there and done that', . . . only without a hint of ever being jaded.

All you have to do is look at the body of work which speaks for itself.

Hunter's experience of working both as stunt coordinator and behind the lens as a genuine 2nd Unit director of automotive action only serves to compliment his on camera roles as talent because this patina gives him the big picture for how to expertly double by matching the stunt action perfectly to the principal actor's mannerisms, gestures and attitude.
